

Josef Skoldeberg is an analyst at IFC, the private sector arm of the World Bank Group. He works on managing the communications aspects of IFC's investments in the Oil, Gas, Mining and Chemicals sectors.

Prior to joining IFC, Josef was a research associate at the Center for Strategy and Competitiveness in Stockholm where he focused on the economies of the Baltic Sea Region. He has also worked in the political arena and held marketing positions in the financial and retail sectors.

Josef holds a masters degree from the Stockholm School of Economics and undergraduate degrees from the University of Texas at Austin.

Born in Sweden, Josef grew up in Austin, TX.